

shadows of dusk
the kangaroo mob
hops over the grasslands

Ewan Magee, 12

winter sunshine
my green pen
writes haiku

earth and sky
divided
into thirds

slight drizzle
mysterious mountains
shrouded in mist

Evie Zhang, 11

midwinter mischief
a bird feeder
for the squirrel

on the lake I see
reflected in symmetry
two butterfly wings

Maia E. Lindsay, 12

jumping out at me
a new word
lackadaisical

how many people
can crush an insect
and not care

white noise
keeping my brother asleep
and me awake

Almila Dukel, 12

unable to sleep
an owl hoots
through the night

Flora McLellan, 12

crushed acorns
across the road
smell of burnt wood

autumn wind
last rose
still in bloom

Leo Akalu-Skanne, 10

gardening days . . .
they fall into a flower
grandma's dreams

Veerangana, 14

boats rock gently
riding
a crested wave

Thomas R. Schaufler, 16

Pods of whales
swim in the sea
swallowing twilight

a seed
into a flower
yellow

Jonah Trout, 11

assembly of ants
swarms the residue
of old strawberry jam

Liliana E. Guzmán, 15

my cat twitches
preying on birds
through the window

Grayson Ruble, 13

soft rain
lulls me to sleep
under the narrow roof

Noah Verrall, 12

publication credits

'on the lake I see', Maia E. Lindsay, received an 'Honorable Mention', United Nations International Student Haiku Contest, 2016

'boats rock gently', Thomas R. Schaufler, received an 'Honorable Mention', United Nations International Student Haiku Contest, 2017

Copyright © hedgerow, 2019. All rights revert to the respective author & artist upon publication. No work featured here may be used, copied, sold or distributed elsewhere without permission. All correspondence to: hedgerowsubmission@gmail.com